Live Hack Workshop

Most businesses already have some cybersecurity tools in place.

The problem is, they're not always sure where the real risks are, how exposed they may be, or what should be fixed first.

That's exactly what this workshop is designed to help with.

In this live, hands-on workshop, we'll walk through the most common cybersecurity gaps we see in small and mid-sized businesses. Then, we'll show a live hack in progress so you can see how attackers look for weak spots and how small issues can quickly turn into bigger problems.

As we go, you'll learn how to identify risks inside your own environment and better understand which ones deserve your attention first.

You'll leave with a clearer understanding of:

Where your biggest vulnerabilities may be

How Hackers Can Take Advantage of Security Gaps

Which risks deserve attention first

Simple steps you can take to improve security right away

No cybersecurity background required. Just practical guidance you can apply during the session and continue using afterward.

Southern Nevada's growth depends on more than roads and development. It depends on our ability to move millions of residents, visitors, and business travelers efficiently through one of the busiest aviation markets in the country.

At the HCC's June Networking Breakfast, Bryant Holt, Senior Director of Aviation for the Clark County Department of Aviation, will provide an inside look at the future of air travel in Southern Nevada and the ambitious plans shaping the region's airport system.

From modernization efforts at Harry Reid International Airport to long-term expansion planning across the Department of Aviation's system of airports, Bryant will discuss how Southern Nevada is preparing for continued growth, evolving travel demands, and the future of regional connectivity. Attendees will gain insight into current infrastructure projects, efforts to enhance capacity and traveler experience, and the critical role aviation continues to play in supporting the region's economy, business community, and tourism industry.
